Pop-Up Weddings – Are You Tempted?

WEDDINGS

PARTIES

CORPORATE

The great big white wedding isn't going to appeal to all couples and there are sure to be some out there that would prefer a more intimate gathering... so pop-up weddings might be the way to go!

According to Look, there's now a luxury pop-up wedding company over in the US called PopBliss that invites ten couples (who get to invite ten guests) to come and say their vows in a collective ceremony, with the first event taking place in March this year.

It certainly sounds like an interesting idea, especially for those couples who don't want to spend years organising their big day and only want their very nearest and dearest to come along for the event. It might be fun to get married with just a handful of friends and family there, and then have a giant party for everyone else after you've actually tied the knot. It would certainly take the pressure off.

Whether you do decide that a pop-up wedding and a big party afterwards is the way to go, or if you're really looking forward to organising a huge wedding, you'll need to sort out marquee hire in Oxfordshire if you're going to provide a space big enough for all your guests to party in.

Here at Richardson Marquees, we have an extensive range of both marquees and catering equipment to hire, so no matter the size of the event you're planning, you know you'll be able to find everything you could ever need with us. Give us a call today.
